

About Lorraine Vaun-Davis

Lorraine is a Partner and the Director of Business School programmes at iOpener. An exceptional and tenacious learning and leadership development expert. She holds an impressive track record in creating, strategizing and implementing dynamic development programs and workshops that achieve exceptional results.

Having started her professional career in financial services Lorraine made the transition to training, facilitating and people development whilst working in this industry. Lorraine specializes in leadership skills development and particularly loves focusing on communication skills together with a wide range of other skills that enable leaders to be more effective in their roles, whilst remaining authentic. Success for her is when participants report having iOpener moments.

Her natural energy & enthusiasm ensures that participants in her workshops are fully engaged a skill which applies equally to both the face to face and virtual worlds. Additionally, having worked with global participants for nearly 20 years she has a depth of understanding in cultural diversity and is able to flex her style to match those she works with.

Because she cares about the detail she is an exceptionally good program director, making sure that clients' needs are brilliantly served. Lorraine is also a frequent lecturer, including having lectured in Strategic HRM to postgraduate students at the University of Bristol.
